

HOW TO PRORATE REAL ESTATE TAXES FORMULA

The closing process occurs under the control of a closing agent who is responsible for the execution of legal agreements and the transfer of money to all interested parties.

At the closing, also known as the closing of escrow, real estate taxes are prorated between the buyers and sellers so that each party pays the appropriate amount of tax for the number of days they own the property.

The proration amounts depend on local customs and previous tax payments.

DOING PRORATION MATH

Figuring the prorated tax for the buyers and sellers is a five-part process:

1. Calculate the daily tax rate by dividing the annual tax rate by the days in the year (365, or 366 for leap years or 244 days through August so then add).
2. Look up the day count for the closing date. For example, the day counts for Jan. 1 and Dec. 31 are 1 and 365 respectively (for a non-leap-year).
3. Calculate the sellers' number of days as the closing day count minus 1.
4. Calculate the buyers' number of days as the days in the year minus the sellers' number of days.
5. Calculate each party's tax obligation as their number of days times the daily tax rate times the property's assessed value.

EXAMPLE OF TAX PRORATION

If the annual tax rate is 1 percent, then you would find the daily tax rate by dividing .01 by 365, for a daily tax rate of 0.0027397 percent. Further suppose that the closing occurs on Sept. 18, the 261st day of the year. The sellers owe tax for 260 days (i.e., 261 - 1). The buyers are on the hook for 105 days (i.e., 365 - 260). If the assessed value of the property is $300,000, then the annual tax bill is $3,000. The sellers' prorated tax bill is $($300,000 \times 0.0027297\%/\text{day} \times 260 \text{ days})$, or $2,136.99. The buyers will have to shell out $($300,000 \times 0.0027297\%/\text{day} \times 105 \text{ days})$, or $863.01 in real estate tax for the year. Note that the total works out to be $3,000 (i.e., $2,136.99 + 863.01).

SELLER'S PREVIOUS PAYMENTS

If the sellers have already paid more tax than they owe, they are due a refund at closing.

The closing agent will transfer the refund amount from the buyer's escrow account, which has money set aside for the refund and the next tax payment. If the sellers have not paid the full amount of property tax they owe, the amount due gets deducted from their escrow account, via a check written by the seller, or deducted from the sale proceeds paid to the seller.

The buyers pay their share from their escrow account. The closing agent collects all the real estate tax money and deposits it with the tax authority.

ASSESSED VS. MARKET VALUE

There may not be any direct relationship between a property's assessed and market values. It is the assessed value that is used to calculate taxes.

In California, Proposition 13 allows recalculation of the assessed value under certain conditions, such as change of ownership, new construction, inflation up to 2 percent, a temporary reduction due to a market value decline and restoration of assessed value after temporary reduction.

Other states and municipalities have their own rules governing assessed amounts.

WARNINGS

Don't lose the closing statement. The closing statement is an important document that you might need to use in the future should you be asked to provide evidence that you paid your share of the property taxes.

TIPS

The buyer, if itemizing deductions, can claim a tax deduction for all of the prorated property tax amount even if the buyer was not required to reimburse the seller for property tax that was already paid.
